

This email contains important news about upcoming changes to your Wikispaces Private Label site. Please read it carefully.

On (or shortly after) January 3, 2012, we will be making two changes to the Wikispaces interface as the first phase of some larger improvements.

1. The page title and the row of tabs at the top of the page are moving down into the page itself.
2. The global navigation elements at the top right of the page are being restyled.

If you are using our popular Tatami theme, the changes will look like this (click on each thumbnail to see a larger version):

These changes will affect all Wikispaces sites, whether you are using one of our premade themes or have built your own custom theme.

This is part of a project that will let us improve the speed of Wikispaces, build a more modern user interface, and build some great new features.

In most cases, you do not need to do anything other than be aware that these changes are coming. If you haven't customized your theme, or have only made minor changes (such as changing colors or adding a custom banner to the top of the theme) it's likely your theme will continue to work just fine.

If, however, you have made substantial layout changes — in particular if you have added or altered the tabs in your theme, or are using Javascript or CSS to hide parts of your theme — you may need to make additional changes to maintain the look and feel you want. If you have any questions or concerns about these changes, please contact us at help@wikispaces.com.
